

Council of Europe Report

<https://eachother.org.uk/council-of-europe-criticises-uks-treatment-of-transgender-people/>

"Adopting a report by Fourat Ben Chikha, a member of the Belgian Senate, the Committee on Equality and Non-Discrimination condemned "the extensive and often virulent attacks on the rights of LGBTI people for several years" in Hungary, Poland, the Russian Federation, Turkey and the United Kingdom."

"The rising hatred against LGBTI people being witnessed in Europe today is the result of sustained and often well-organised attacks on their human rights. These attacks deliberately mis-characterise the fight for the equality of LGBTI people as so-called "gender ideology" and seek to stifle the identities and realities of all those who challenge the social constructs that perpetuate gender inequalities and gender-based violence in our societies. These attacks are harmful to women as well as LGBTI people."

The WHRC/WDI declaration:

<https://chican3ry.medium.com/the-whrc-declaration-explained-part-1-5ded6522aa33>

"First of all, the introduction lays the groundwork for claiming that trans rights in general constitute a form of discrimination against women and that laws enforcing trans civil rights to transition and be recognised as our transitioned/acquired sex (or gender, whatever) should be abolished or modified so that they no longer serve this function."

<https://transsafety.network/posts/alba-whrc-conspiracy/>

"WHRC's accusations also link to a piece by Jennifer Bilek on the Catholic conservative website First Things to bolster the implication of sinister plans connected with the LGBT lobby. Bilek has become notorious for her now years-long career of claiming that Jewish Billionaires are behind a global transhumanist conspiracy to use LGBT rights and particularly trans rights as a plot for technological destruction of nature."

Kathryn Bristow

I'm proud to be elected as the first openly transgender co-chair of Green Party Women. I'll ensure that the group represents all women, girls and non-binary people in the party.

Green Party Women

Given your posts about abolishing the protected characteristic of 'sex' which protects women and girls, I have little faith in your willingness or capacity to protect women and girls.

Cllr Peter Barnett

Class has nothing to do with it. There's a transgender billionaire proving enormous funding to this ideological cult. And who makes a fortune from the life-long drugs and medical procedures transitioning folk go through.

"The Green Party Women (currently not functioning since transwoman Kathryn Bristow was elected chair and closed down its communications with women in the party)".

It's amazing that anyone wants to support these trans-attempts of womanhood, when it is

On Gillick Competency, & undermining abortion rights:

<https://criticallegalthinking.com/2021/01/19/blocking-puberty-blockers-boobs-for-all-in-latest-anti-trans-craze-judgment/>

"Anti-abortion groups now have grounds to argue young people cannot consent to abortion. In fact Bell's solicitor, Paul Conrathe, is involved in a number of anti-abortion cases. "

<https://www.translegalproject.org/post/the-bell-v-tavistock-appeal-court-ruling>

"If Gillick competence is overturned, then parents would be able to prevent their children from seeking abortions or contraception. "

<https://abortionrights.org.uk/tavistock-v-bell-2/>

"We also note, with some concern that the legal team have a history of trying to weaken Gillick competence, working with the Pro Life Alliance."

<https://legalresearch.blogs.bris.ac.uk/2021/02/bell-v-tavistock-the-medico-legal-consequences/>

Lastly, the decision is likely to have an influence on other aspects of minors' healthcare. Particularly troubling are the implications for reproductive healthcare decisions such as abortion which may also be said to have "lifelong consequences." The tightening of Gillick competence in Bell is a worrying precedent for those seeking to protect minors' reproductive autonomy.

Paul Conrathe: Activist Lawyer

Several commentators have also noted that instructing solicitor Paul Conrathe is an activist lawyer with a long history of taking anti-abortion cases. It is difficult to imagine a more patriarchal case than that in 2001 where Conrathe, working with the Pro-Life Alliance – a single-issue anti-abortion party – sought an injunction on behalf of Stephen Hone to force his ex-girlfriend to continue an unwanted pregnancy. He then took on the case of Reverend Jepson in a judicial review of a Crown Prosecution Service decision not to prosecute doctors who had authorised a termination of pregnancy in a case of fetal abnormality, the grounds of which Jepson disputed. In a separate case he attempted to overturn the Gillick ruling.

<https://www.losangelesblade.com/2021/09/18/united-kingdoms-court-of-appeal-obliterates-keira-bell/>

It was also noted that the panel of experts brought in by Bell's legal team didn't include anyone who actually works with trans youth, but did include a veterinarian, two doctors who work with the American anti-LGBT hate group Alliance defending freedom, and two Australian proponents of conversion therapy.

The Appeals Court also found that Tavistock was providing sufficient information for informed consent under Gillick Competence and that this by itself was sufficient to overturn the original decision. They also found that the lower court overstepped its bounds by involving itself in medical matters it wasn't equipped to understand, nor legally allowed to intervene on. It found that blockers are not dangerous (based on actual expert testimony), that correlation is not causation, and noted that it's likely clinicians have gotten better at diagnosis over the past 20 years.

The Court of Appeal notes that under UK law, it is not the place of the court to come between a patient and their doctor, and that they have no intention of overturning Gillick, which clearly applies to transgender people being offered these treatments. They essentially conclude that the case should have been thrown out day one, and the High Court had overstepped its bounds in ways that strain credulity.

Bell's team recognized this was the end, and promptly announced that they would appeal because, "The Gillick competency test is no longer fit for purpose." Gillick underlies much of UK law on reproductive rights, and undermining it is a holy grail of the religious right there, the same way overturning Roe v. Wade is in the US. Given the ties Bell's team has to the global religious conservative movement, this development is unsurprising.

Simon Whitten, a podcaster who reports on pseudoscience drew attention to the fact that one significant contributor who was cited multiple times in the final judgement has numerous widely published concerns standing against him, in particular that he has a track record of providing expertise outside of his specialisation in cases connected with the US based evangelical-right legal campaigning firm Alliance Defending Freedom (ADF). The ADF have a very long track record on opposing women's and LGBT human rights including making homosexuality illegal, fighting to support commercial discrimination against gay customers, defending the movement to push conversion therapy on LGBT people, and discrimination against same-sex married people.

Misinformation on trans prisoners:

<https://chican3ry.medium.com/alice-sullivan-and-allison-bailey-are-misleading-the-public-and-uk-government-bodies-about-rape-f9a9335f5df4>

"Sociology professor Alice Sullivan made claims to the Scottish Government as well as on Twitter that suggested that there existed anomalies in criminal justice data that are related to the recognition of trans women according to their gender identity."

"This has been escalated by The Times of London, and the journalist Alex Massie who have published, first on December 14th, and then republishing in January 5th, repeating the misleading claims with slight adjustments."

"The Times have hidden their correction notice identifying this article as having been corrected behind a paywall."

Funding from the far-right

<https://www.aidsmap.com/news/may-2021/whos-financing-anti-gender-movement-europe>

"Secretary of the European Parliamentary Forum for Sexual and Reproductive Rights (EPF) presented findings from an EPF analysis of the financial statements of over 50 'anti-gender' organisations. Datta explained that 'anti-gender' is a term used in this context to mean something broader than anti-choice: it includes being against the right to abortion, against LGBT rights, against children's rights and against equality overall.

EPF accessed the financial statements of over 100 organisations, covering the period 2009 to 2018, finding detailed data on over 50. Full details will be published in an upcoming EPF report: Tip of the iceberg: Religious extremist funders against human rights for sexuality and reproduction in Europe."

"The US financing comes mainly from ten key Christian Right organisations, usually funded by private individuals linked to far-right and libertarian causes in the US. They seek to actively influence European institutions and their presence in Europe has become significant."

<https://www.codastory.com/waronscience/funding-anti-gender-foundations/>

<https://www.codastory.com/waronscience/funding-anti-gender-foundations/>

“What struck me was the multiple interrelationships between so many of the anti-gender movements which are really on the extremist fringe of the political discourse and aren’t grounded in values of human rights and democracy,” said Datta. “It’s not normal to see these groups interact with each other, but it does look like they have been forging consensus around a common enemy.” Neil Datta (Secretary of the European Parliamentary Forum on Sexual and Reproductive Rights.)

“This is why a new report from Logically – one of the world’s largest fact-checkers, which uses artificial intelligence to debunk disinformation online – may come as a shock to gender critics. It reveals that support for the #KeepPrisonsSingleSex campaign was dramatically inflated and much smaller than numbers initially conveyed, with the hashtag having been primarily driven by a large network of bots.”

<https://www.epfweb.org/sites/default/files/2021-06/Tip%20of%20the%20Iceberg%20June%202021%20Final.pdf>

“Tip of the Iceberg is the first attempt understand the anti-gender mobilisation in Europe through the perspective of their funding base. This report assembles financial data covering a ten year period of over 50 anti-gender actors operating in Europe. It then takes a deeper look at how religious extremists generate this funding to roll back human rights in sexuality and reproduction.”
